

We are putting together an exhibition for October and November which will present information on the US presidential election, even though Puerto Ricans and Continentals (my favorite term for those of us who came from the US mainland to live here) cannot vote for president.

The exhibition will include a power point presentation on the US electoral process and will include posters and an exhibition of documents relating to the presidential election. We also plan to include unusual and interesting facts concerning prior presidential elections.

Time permitting, we will also include information on the electoral process for governor of Puerto Rico.

Is anyone else planning such an exhibition? I would like to hear from you and see information added here such as photos and videos of any such exhibitions.

Thanks,

Jane
